

Internships in Public Art

Several non-profit organizations in the field of public art are interested in working with CVA student interns. These internships are flexible and can be tailored, to a degree, to the student's interests. For instance, interns could assist artists with research and development of projects, be part of hands-on installation and maintenance of public art, become involved in the publication of reports and journals, or help with designing materials (both web and print) for the organization. Typically, these internships are unpaid, since the sponsors are non-profit organizations.
